OPERATIONS

In January, 1952 the 4th Maintenance Squadron moved its operations from an airbase near Tokyo to another airbase in southern Japan. Its maintenance operations were combined with 51st Maintenance Squadron in an operation officially known as REMCO (Rear Echelon Maintenance Combined Operation). The unit services every F-86 Sabre which flies in Korea. Repair of battle damage, engine overhaul and repair, machine shop, sheet metal, wood-mill are but a few of the activities in which men of the Fourth are engaged.

The record of the 4th Maintenance Squadron in 1952 is one of hard work, co-operation, and accomplishment. The men of this Squadron look forward to new records to be made and broken.
