EMBLEM

37 Aviation Depot Squadron emblem: on a disc divided per pale Air Force golden yellow and Air Force blue, the top of a globe issuing from base divided per pale Air Force golden yellow and Air Force blue; rising from the upper perimeter of the globe, a white atomic cloud edged red surmounted by a stylized white aircraft in horizontal position pointing to dexter, edged Air Force blue, between in dexter a red sun and in sinister four white stars; on the globe in dexter, grid lines, outlines of land areas, and a bullet in horizontal position pointing to sinister, all Air Force blue; on the globe in sinister, grid lines, outlines of land areas, and a bomb in horizontal position pointing to dexter, all white. SIGNIFANCE: Our emblem is symbolic of our squadron's primary mission. The bomb and bullet signify our readiness with all types of munitions. The divided yellow and blue background indicates our preparedness twenty-four hours a day; the sun represents our power of organization, and the four stars symbolize the numbered Air Forces under the Strategic Air Command. The aircraft over the globe indicates our capabilities to deliver anywhere, while the atomic cloud indicates the power of SAC. The Air Force colors, ultramarine blue and golden yellow, dominate our emblem .
