OPERATIONS

The 3496th Technical Training Squadron continues to provide some air intelligence training at Lowry. The squadron sends training teams throughout the United States and overseas. All branches of the armed forces are represented on the instructional staff. Air intelligence training consists of targeting, imagery interpretation, weaponeering, use of sensor data, and intelligence data handling systems. The squadron will move to Goodfellow Air Force Base in October 1988, completing the consolidation of air intelligence training at that center
