EMBLEM

On an Air Force blue area in the shape of a missile nose cone, edged Air Force golden yellow, a white cloud formation issuing from base, surmounted by the top of a globe, AF blue, grid lines white, also issuing from base; over all palewise a missile pointing upward supported on either side by a mailed hand, all silver-gray, all highlighted white, all emitting trails of flame to base, AF golden yellow and red; two golden yellow atoms in orbit, silver-gray and red, around the nose of the missile; outlines and details AF blue throughout. SIGNIFICANCE: The mailed hands supporting the missile indicate our unlimited strength in support of the missile program. The blue background represents the vastness of the sky above the clouds and the unlimited capabilities of the missile. The globe is a symbol of mobility and worldwide coverage. The atoms in orbit about the missile indicate TN atomic capabilities. The golden yellow border indicates bright hopes for lasting peace and, together with the ultramarine blue background, constitutes the official Air Force colors. (Approved, 12 Mar 1959)

MOTTO

OPERATIONS

A training organization, the 4504th Missile Training Wing was established at Orlando AFB for Matador and then Mace training. Many AAFM members spent time in this unit before heading for Europe or the Pacific. The 4504th Missile Training Wing had three squadrons, the 4504th Student Squadron, the 4504th Training Squadron (for Instructors and Education) ; and the 4504th Support Squadron.
